S&P 500 Index profitability was nil sequentially in 2019, but Indian IT services reported revenue growth

Trump 2.0: What's in store for IT services?

Now that the dust has settled following the US elections, we analyze the potential impact of the incoming Trump administration on major client industries in the US, their technology spending behaviors, and the subsequent effects on IT services' revenue growth rates. Our analysis focuses on three key vectors: 1) immigration policies; 2) corporate tax rates; and 3) trade war. Our findings indicate that IT services vendors are now largely immune to immigration shocks. While there could be a definite gross positive push from corporate tax cuts, a more intense trade war could offset some of these benefits, in our opinion. We also analyze how IT services companies fared in the earlier term. While the quantifiable impact of these initiatives may be debatable, we expect technology spending to trend upwards for CY26/CY27, led by a business-friendly administration and declining interest rates.

Impact of Visa and immigration

- The first term of the Trump presidency did lead to an outsized increase in rejection rates, as depicted in Exhibit 2. The rejection rates for H1B visas surged from an average of 4.6% prior to 2016 to 15.4% during the presidency.
- This was a blessing in disguise for the IT services sector; however, the companies fundamentally altered their hiring strategies and increased localized on-shore hiring.
- Exhibit 1 shows that IT services' hiring plans are now decoupled from the H1B regime; the number of applications has dipped by 51% from the peak of FY17.
- While the new administration may be incrementally positive about skilled immigration, we expect the impact to be neutral to marginally positive.

Corporate tax cuts: good in isolation, marred by tariffs

- Trump's Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA, Dec'17) reduced the federal corporate tax rate to 21% from 35%, along with a few other tax sops for the US corporates.
- As portrayed in our exhibits, this correlated with a bump in earnings growth across major industries.
- The key industries that benefitted were BFSI, IT and software, Energy, and Industrials.
- What is interesting, however, is that the ensuing trade war and tariff regime offset the gains from tax cuts for key industries.
- Our analysis suggests that semiconductors, automotive, steel, manufacturing, and retail companies experienced elevated manufacturing costs and significantly stressed supply chains, nullifying some of the impact from these tax cuts.

Indian IT services: Correlation with tax cuts only tangential

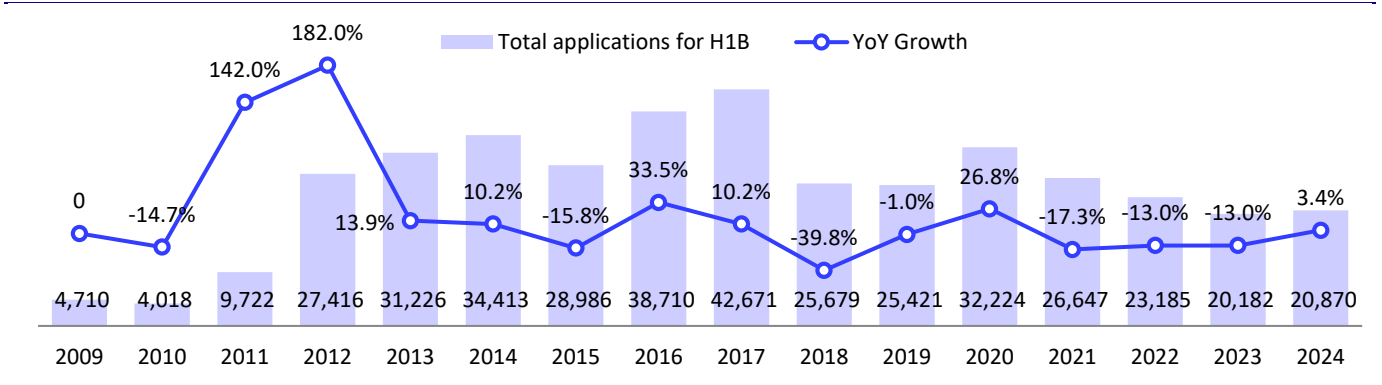

- The top 5 Indian IT services companies posted an average revenue growth of 7.5% during 2016-20 when Trump was in the helm of the White House, while the growth was 7.9% during the first three years of the presidency.
- While the fine print on immigration, tax cuts, or trade wars will matter, news reports suggest Trump's administration will be far more business-friendly as compared to the outgoing regime.

- The technology spending has been depressed over the past two years, and we believe a new regime along with continued rate cuts augur well for the tech spending cycle.
- Healthcare and the US banks will continue to lead growth; manufacturing (especially aero and automotive) may face short-term headwinds.
- We are especially enthused by hi-tech's resurgence, which we believe is ahead of schedule.
- Our top picks are HCL Technologies (TP: INR2,300), LTIMindtree (TP: INR7,400), Coforge (TP: INR10,000), and Persistent Systems (TP: INR6,300). We estimate HCL to lead revenue growth among large caps over the next three years, driven by its resilient portfolio and engineering services. Our positive outlook on LTIMindtree is based on its best-in-class offerings in data and ERP modernization, with a recovery in US banks' discretionary spending expected to further support its growth. We believe Coforge's healthy executable order book and a rebound in BFS client spending bode well for its organic business. Cigniti could prove to be an effective long-term asset. Persistent Systems, with its strong product engineering background, remains the fastest-growing IT services company in our coverage and is well-positioned to benefit from the long-term GenAI investments.

Impact of Visa and immigration

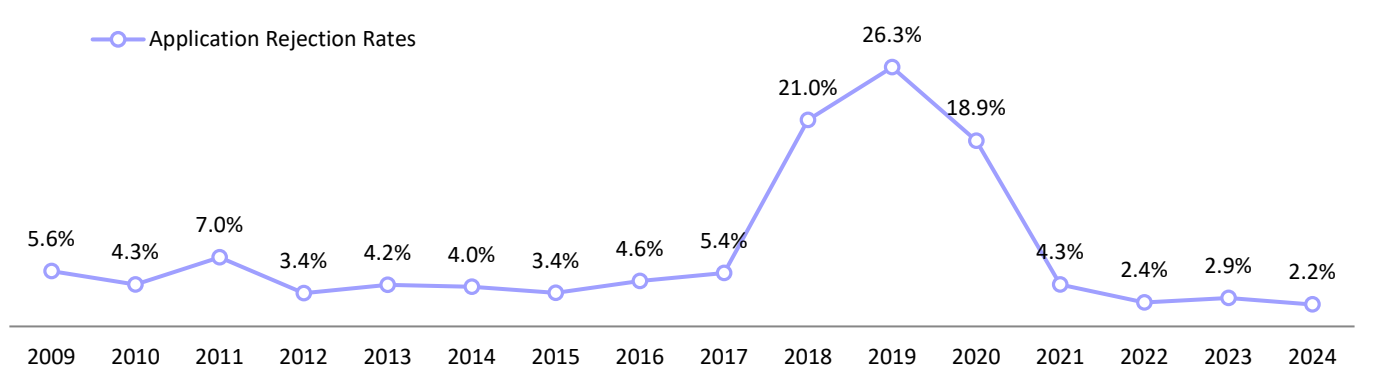

- We analyzed the H1B applications for the top four Indian IT companies, viz., TCS, Infosys, Wipro, and HCL, over 2009-24. The 2009-16 period experienced a significant jump in visa applications, marked by the immigration-friendly policies of the then administration. The applications posted a 35.1% CAGR over 2009-16.
- However, during Mr. Trump’s tenure, the tighter norms around immigration guidelines saw a fall in H1B visa applications. The applications dropped 24.5% during the Trump administration (2016-20) from the highs of 2017. As of 2024, the applications have declined 51% from the peak of 2017.
- The application rejection rate jumped to ~27% in 2019, which was averaging ~5% in the pre-Trump period.
- We believe immigration and H1B norms will have minimal impact on Indian IT services hiring strategy, as a large part is now decoupled.

Corporate tax cuts: Good in isolation, marred by tariffs

- Trump's Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA, Dec'17) reduced the federal corporate tax rate to 21% from 35%, along with a few other tax sops for the US corporates.
- This led to the fueling of earnings across major industries, as shown in Exhibits 3 to 6. Sectors such as BFSI, IT, Energy, and Industrials witnessed an EPS growth in almost double digits, which was averaging in single-to-low-middle digits during FY15-FY17.
- What is interesting, however, is that the ensuing trade war and the tariff regime offset the gains from tax cuts for key industries. This led to key sectors posting flat growth in the year, followed by FY18.
- That said, FY19 saw a normalization of earnings, and one might argue the trade war and tariffs imposed actually hurt earnings for industrials.

Exhibit 3: S&P 500 Financials Index saw a 26.6% EPS growth

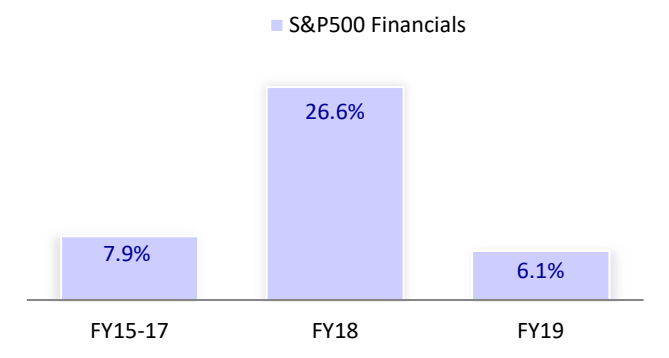

Exhibit 4: S&P 500 IT index saw ~30% EPS growth vs. the average growth of ~10% prior to tax cuts

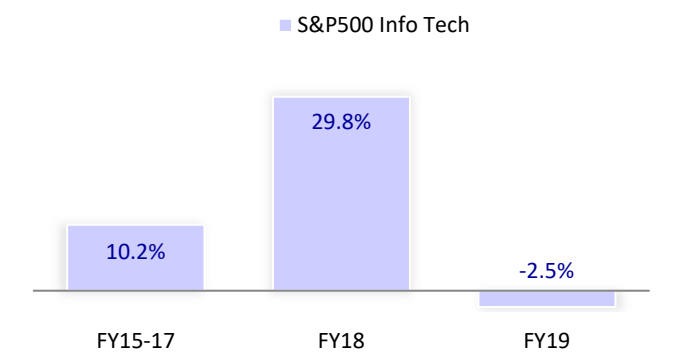

Exhibit 5: S&P Energy Index saw a three-digit EPS growth...

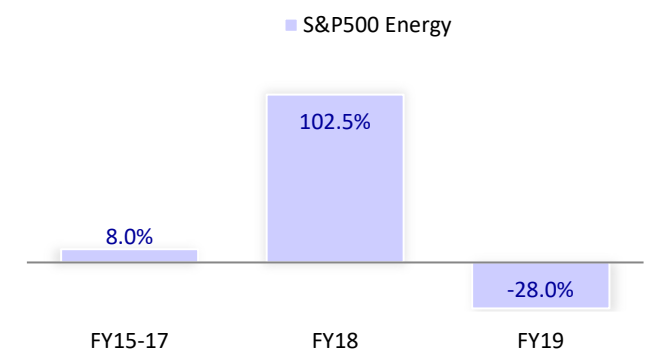

Exhibit 6: ..while industrials also clocked a double-digit EPS growth

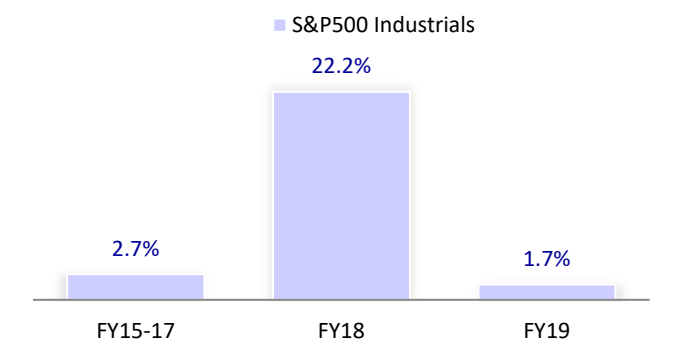

Exhibit 7: S&P Healthcare marked mid-teens growth

Indian IT: Correlation with tax cuts only tangential

- As depicted in Exhibit 9, Indian IT services revenue accelerated in FY18 with higher EPS growth for S&P500 firms, but the correlation isn't as strong. Although tax cuts have influenced IT spending, potential offsets from trade tensions and the resultant pressure on the firms' P&L must be monitored.
- FY19 was different, with S&P 500 EPS growth stagnating while IT services revenue grew ~7%, suggesting that the companies prioritized high-importance IT spending even amid flat earnings.
- Further, major sectoral indices—such as Healthcare, BFSI, Manufacturing, and Consumer—exhibited a strong correlation with revenue growth of top IT firms.
- Admittedly, this comparison is not watertight: vertical revenue numbers include revenues from other geographies as well, despite the US contributing a lion's share of these revenues.
- The correlation exercise aside, we believe the technology spending environment is turning favorable after two years of depressed tech spending.
- Anticipated rate cuts could revitalize investments, particularly in healthcare and banking, while manufacturing may face short-term challenges.
