Cotton candy prices edged up 0.04% to settle at ₹54,160, driven by rising cotton yarn demand from garment industries and robust export orders. However, domestic cotton arrivals in the northern Indian states of Punjab, Haryana, and Rajasthan have declined by 43% year-on-year as of November 30, 2024, impacting the supply chain. Farmers are reportedly holding back kapas (unginned cotton) in anticipation of better prices, leading to raw material shortages for ginneries and spinners. India's cotton production for the 2024-25 season is projected at 302.25 lakh bales of 170 kg each, with imports expected to rise to 25 lakh bales, a significant increase from the previous season. By November 30, 9 lakh bales had already arrived at Indian ports. The closing stock for September 2025 is estimated at 26.44 lakh bales, lower than last year's 30.19 lakh bales. Globally, cotton production for 2024/25 is projected at 117.4 million bales, driven by higher output in India, Argentina, and Brazil. Consumption is estimated to rise by 570,000 bales, with increased demand in India, Pakistan, and Vietnam offsetting a decline in China. World ending stocks are raised by 267,000 bales, while beginning stocks are reduced by 428,000 bales. Technically, the cotton candy market saw short covering, with open interest dropping 0.27% to 367 contracts. Prices found support at ₹53,260, with a potential downside to ₹52,350. Resistance is likely at ₹55,540, and a breakout above this level could test ₹56,910, supported by demand recovery and mixed supply dynamics.
