Nifty continues to exhibit resilience around the crucial 25400 support zone while sustaining its Inside Bar range-bound structure. Despite multiple reversal formations emerging near this base, the index has struggled to overcome the descending trendline resistance positioned around 25670. An attempt to surpass the 50-DEMA near 25660 lacked follow-throughs, with the index closing near 25480 and forming an Inside Bar followed by a Homing Pigeon pattern, both indicating consolidation near key support. The 25400 zone has evolved into a strong demand base over recent sessions. February witnessed heightened volatility, with a wide swing between 26340 and 24570 before settling near the midpoint around 25400. March, however, historically carries a favourable seasonal bias, often delivering strong directional moves, typically on the upside. Technically, the defence of 25400, coupled with a prior Bullish Engulfing and subsequent buying interest, strengthens this floor. A decisive close below 25400 may open downside toward 25040. Intraday dips near the 200-DEMA at 25250 could offer contra long opportunities. On the upside, resistances are placed at 25760, 25850, and 26000, while the broader bullish structure remains intact above 25400.
