GLOBAL MARKET ROUND UP

- ⇒ Gold pared losses after President Donald Trump announced plans to impose 25% tariffs on goods from Japan and South Korea starting August 1. The move marks the first of what the US president indicated would be a series of written warnings and trade deals announced on Monday. The two Asian countries now face a tight three-week deadline to either open their markets to American products or increase production within the US to avoid these unilateral tariffs.
- ⇒ This decision is part of Trump's effort to overhaul US trade policies, which have consistently created uncertainty for markets and, as a result, increased demand for gold as a safe-haven asset.
- ⇒ Crude oil prices reversed an early decline on Monday, despite a larger-than-expected supply increase announced by OPEC+ for August over the weekend. Officials from the group pointed to favorable summer demand as a reason for their optimism that the additional barrels could be absorbed. Additionally, Saudi Arabia raised the price of its main crude grade for Asia.
- ⇒ Meanwhile, in the Middle East, a second vessel was targeted near Yemen on Monday, just hours after Iranian-backed Houthis claimed responsibility for an earlier attack on another ship in the same region. This situation contributed to a risk premium on oil prices..
- ⇒ Natural gas on Monday bounced back from a 6-week low and ended slightly higher, as short covering occurred after updated weather forecasts predicted above-normal temperatures in the central US.
- ⇒ Copper and other base metals moved lower on Monday as tariff-related uncertainty and recovery in the US dollar weighed on base metal prices.
