Cottoncandy prices fell by 0.64%, settling at ₹54,180, amid expectations of higher global production for the 2024-25 cotton year. Global output is projected to rise by 1.2 million bales, reaching 117.4 million bales, driven by larger crops in India and Argentina. However, the supply chain in India faces challenges, with North Indian states witnessing a 43% decline in kapas arrivals till November 30, 2024, compared to last year. Farmers are holding back their produce in hopes of higher prices, while ginners and spinners, especially in Punjab, face raw material shortages. India's cotton imports are estimated to increase significantly by 9.8 lakh bales to 25 lakh bales during the 2024-25 season, with 9 lakh bales already arriving at Indian ports by the end of November. The Cotton Association of India (CAI) has maintained its pressing estimate at 302.25 lakh bales and projected a closing stock of 26.44 lakh bales for September 2025, down from 30.19 lakh bales last year. On the global front, U.S. cotton production is revised up to 14.3 million bales, while world consumption is raised by 570,000 bales due to increased demand in India, Pakistan, and Vietnam. Ending stocks globally are projected higher, supported by increases in Argentina, the U.S., and Pakistan. The market saw fresh selling with a 0.29% rise in open interest to 343 contracts, while prices dropped by ₹350. Immediate support is seen at ₹54,090, with further downside to ₹53,990. Resistance is expected at ₹54,300, and a breakout could test ₹54,410.
